In order to enjoy the present, it is necessary to be intent on the present. To be doing one thing, and thinking of another, is a very unsatisfactory mood of spending life.

At the bottom of a good deal of the bravery that appears in the world there lurks a miserable cowardice. Men will face powder and steel because they cannot face public opinion.

MEMORIES.

We tread the same hills that our forefathers trod,
We shed the same tears that our fathers have shed,
We have the same horror of boarding-house hash,
And we mash the same girls that our fathers would mash,
If they could.

We see the same sun that for ages has rolled,
We listen to tales that our forefathers told,
The same inspiration comes down from above
That filled their long lives with beauty and love,
This is granted.

We breathe the same air that our fathers inhaled,
We sail the same waters our fathers have sailed,
We've the same high ambitions, the yearning for fame,
And our highest officials get drunk just the same,
Won't they always?

ANSON GREY.

Anson Grey was a still, stern man at thirty, shut up within himself and by himself, in his great stone mansion on the hill, and people knew no more about him than they knew about the dead. His early years had been passed abroad, where, or how, nobody knew and most had ceased to care, for that matter; the last two had been passed in Burlingame.

A brilliant light at night, shining from the great east windows, and occasional gallops through the town, by day, were the only tokens of his presence. However a change was coming and that without warning, Anson Grey fell sick, suddenly and dangerously so. The village doctor was summoned, who in turn telegraphed for another from the neighboring city in hot haste, and together, they said in whispers, that their patient would probably die. There was no woman in the great house to act as nurse, and the head servant, obeying doubtless his master's orders, refused to allow one there as yet.

How it came about was a mystery, but one morning, when the master had laid a week half senseless, an unusual cloud of dust was observed whirling up the hill, and emerging therefrom was a carriage, splashed and weather-stained, headed by two straining, panting horses, who came up to the entrance as if driven by the evil one. A lady, tall and fair as sunlight, pushed open the carriage door impatiently and sprang out. With a hasty glance around she hurried up the steps, entered the drawing-room and stood before the two astonished gentlemen who were seated there.

"Is Anson Grey alive?"

"Yes, but he grows worse."

Before they divined her intention, she had passed them, and was in the next room bending over the sick man.

"The devil will be to pay if she excites him now," the elder one said, "If some good nurse had come, it might have been of some use; but this dainty thing—bah!"

She came out in a moment, her face white but determined.

"Will you be kind enough to send for a minister and remain until he comes?" she asked, as she began to remove her things.

There was something in her manner that forbade questioning, and they obeyed her like so many dumb men, as they said afterward.

The minister did come; William Skinner, the head servant was called, and after the three held a private conference, which seemed to be satisfactory, they came out and, to the amazement of all, the lady stood beside Anson Grey and the marriage vows were taken.

The wise doctors were mistaken in their estimate of their unknown. She was something besides a fair young lady, as her actions soon proved. A new order of things was instituted in the sick man's room, and his wife installed herself as nurse, a change which told for the better. In a month he was riding through the village, with his wife at his side, all eyes, of course, agog to catch a glimpse of her handsome face.

All agreed that she was just an angel, when they came to church the next Sunday, and sat down in one of the pews like other people, they were more than ever confirmed in their opinion. What they never knew was this:

Three years before, Anson Grey, haughty and indolent, was killing time at one of the fashionable watering places where Edith Willoughby also lingered, though sorely against her will.

A sweet and wondrously fair face, much admired, and sought after, Anson Grey had half a mind to enter the lists with the others, but something kept him back, and he only exchanged a few words with her now and then.

There happened to come a heavy, two days' flood, and the first night of it Edith sent a servant asking Mr. Grey to come to a private parlor for a moment. He obeyed the summons with alacrity, wondering much what could be coming now.

Edith was waiting for him, cloaked and hooded, and evidently in haste to be off somewhere.

"I hope you will pardon me," she said, as she closed the door behind him, "but really I did not know whom to ask and mamma will not allow me to go by myself. A poor woman down on the beach is sick, perhaps dying, and I must go to see her. Her little boy just came after me. I was there yesterday and they are in great distress. Could I trouble you to go with me?"

"I will do your errand. It is too stormy for you to venture out."

"Oh, it is no errand. I am sorry to trouble anybody."

Mr. Grey saw what was wanted, and saying he would be back directly, vanished for his rubber suit.

The rain drove into their faces, and the wind howled through the dark night like the minister of a thousand storms—not for a poor fisherwoman, perhaps, but for one as good as fair Edith Willoughby, he should not have hesitated a moment. When they came upon the beach the waves fairly leaped into their faces, and Edith shivered and clung half terrified to her companion in spite of herself.

"I believe you had better return now, and leave it to me," he said.

"No, we are almost there. I should never forgive myself if I did," she answered, catching her breath as she spoke. "It is only you I am worried about." "I am glad to be able to help you," he said. And I think he spoke the truth.

Inside the cottage poor Grace Pooley lay on her hard bed trying to breathe on a little longer, if so the good God might send some good friend before she died, to care for her orphan boy.

When the door opened her eyes brightened, and she raised up a little.

"The Lord bless ye for coming. I know He will," she said as Edith threw off her wet covering and went toward her.

"This is only one of the boarders who came with me," she said in reply to the woman's questioning look. "I should have come to-day had I known that you were worse."

She sat down beside the bed, and Anson Grey watched her as she spoke in a low, tender voice to the grateful woman. Among the words which see could distinguish was a promise to be to Jamie; and when the old woman who seemed to be nurse came up to administer something, and in a half whisper asked Edith to pray with them, he began to think he was in another world. And it was another to him truly. Surely she would never do that. But she did. Kneeling upon the bare floor, clasping her white hands, she sent up such a prayer for help and strength as Anson Grey had never dreamed of hearing before.

After that night Anson Grey knew where his heart was, but for his life he dared not approach Edith. She seemed an immeasurable distance from such as he, but he cherished the memory of her prayers as the one glimpse into heaven for which he should thank God all his life.

Edith's mother was a gay woman, and such she meant her daughter to be, though for her life she could not keep her from ferreting out and helping also, an innumerable number of forlorn, poverty stricken people who had no earthly claim upon her, as they went their fashionable rounds. It was mortifying, even exasperating, but she was powerless to prevent it. They were to be off again soon, Anson Grey heard; but he would have missed seeing her had he not accidently met her as she was hurrying up the beach toward their boarding house on the very day they left. He could not let her go without telling her what was in his heart.

"May I speak to you a moment?" he said abruptly stopping her.

"Certainly."

As the words left her lips she saw what his speaking was going to be.

"Oh, not that, Mr. Grey!"

Somehow he took courage from the quick paling of her lips,

"Yes that I love you and want you for my wife."

"I am to be married Christmas."

He turned and was leaving her, when something made her speak.

"Mr. Grey."

He faced her again and she saw how white and stern he looked.

"Had I been free you would not have asked in vain."

"For days and weeks afterward, Anson Grey hugged the memory of her look, as she said those blessed words, to his heart, caring more for that than for the love and caresses of any other.

Christmas came, but death came with it, and Edith's lover went his long journey, leaving his affianced bride and her scheming mother to console themselves as best they might.

In a way mysterious to all save William Skinner, Edith heard of Anson Grey's illness, and, as we have seen, went to him and had the courage to become his wife.

The people of Burlingame learned to love the gentle mistress of the old stone mansion on the hill, and never a suffering one called for help in vain, as long as "my lady" as they called her, was mistress there.

Siberia.

In St. Petersburg was celebrated on December 18, the three hundredth anniversary of Russian rule in Siberia. December 18 was chosen as the day for this celebration, not because it was the exact date of the acquisition, but because it was the name-day of the young heir apparent, Nicholas Alexandrowitch, the exact Siberian date being unknown to Russian history.

Tobogganing.

The toboggan, or Indian sleigh, is made from long, flat strips of hickory of a thickness of from one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch and from eighteen inches to thirty inches wide, according to desire, while the length may vary from three to seven feet. The long strips that are fastened together to make the desired width are turned up at one and, after the manner of the old Dutch or "turn-up" skate of twenty years ago. Upon the toboggan may be placed a cushion or not as to choice. Generally there is a very good cushion on each. The steering is done by the gentleman in charge of the toboggan, who sits in the stern of the craft, with his cargo of ladies fair in front of him. Some toboggans will hold five or six adults very comfortably. All who make the trip get upon the toboggan, just on the brow of the hill or slide. The steersman is the last to embark. He is supplied with a sharp pointed hickory stick, about four inches long, one held in each hand. He is gently pushed over the top of the slide with his freight of ladies. If he finds his craft veer to the right he strikes hard with the right hand stick into the snow to bring her straight again. All the time he and his toboggan are careering toward the foot of the hill like the wind, and he must be clever if he would miss an upset. His bevy of fair damsels do not like to be upset and rolled unceremoniously over the generally frozen surface of the hillside. Thus he exerts all his energies, and if he is strong and clever brings his craft safely to the hill bottom. Then there is a walk back in the moonlight or the torchlight to the summit of the hill and the ride is repeated. But while the steersman must know his business in regard to the safety of his craft he must also be accomplished in the knowledge of how to upset the toboggan into a soft snow bank. Some of the jolliest of the parties rather like to be suddenly hurled into each other's arms in that manner, and have their stout beaux pull them out again. The advantage of the toboggan over the bobsled is that on the former a spill means only a shake or two. As the tobogganer skims along with only an inch between his body and the snow he has not far to fall when the upset comes. Woe betide him, though, should he run into a tree. A few lives have been lost in this way by reckless and venturesome gentlemen.

Grandpa.

The grandpa is an individual, aged somewhere between 50 and 100 years, of a promiscuous temperament, and is a common occurrence in all well-regulated families. Next to a healthy mother-in-law, they have more active business on hand than any other party in the household. They are the standard authority on all leading topics, and what they don't know about things that took place sixty-five years ago, or will take place for the next sixty-five years to come, is a damage for any man to know. Grandpas are not entirely useless; they are handy to hold babies and feed the pigs, and are very smart at mending a broken broom-handle, and sifting coal ashes, and are good at putting up clothes-lines on washing days. I have seen grandpas that could churn good, but I consider it a mighty mean trick to set an old fellow of 80 years to churning butter. I am a grandpa myself, but I won't churn butter for no concern, not if I understand myself. I am solid on this conclusion as a graven image. I am willing to rock baby all the time while the women folks are boiling soap, I am willing to cut rags to work up into a rag carpet, they can keep me hunting hens' eggs wet days, or picking green currants, or I will even dip candles, or core apples for sauce, or turn a grind-stone, but, by thunder, I won't churn. I have examined myself on this subject, and I will bet a jack-knife, so long as he remains in his right mind, Josh Billings won't churn. As a general thing grandpas are a set of conceited old fools who don't seem to realize that what they know themselves is the result of experience, and that younger people have got to get their knowledge in the same way. Grandpas are poor help at bringing up children; they have got precept and catechisian enough, but the young ones all seem to understand that grandpa minds them a heap more than they mind grandpa.

For young cattle feed one of flesh to 8 of heat-producing substances, and to older animals give one to six. Most of the food of young cattle go to make up bone and muscle, leaving about third class manure; the food of half-grown animals goes to make flesh mostly, leaving second-class manure; the food of mature animals goes to make fat and support life, the excess becoming first-class manure, exclusive of water. Chemically animals coming to maturity will eat about one-fifth of their own weight per day.

Never let a man imagine he can pursue a good end by evil means, without sinning against his own soul! Any other issue is doubtful; the evil effect upon himself is certain.

It is not in the storm nor in the strife,
We feel benumbed and wish to be no more.
But in the after-silence on the shore,
When all is lost except a little life.

More Meat.

No producer need fear becoming the owner of too many cattle or other meat-producing animals, provided he is so situated as to give them proper care and maintain a profitable growth at all seasons. The very poorest—those who formerly seldom bought meats—now swarm about the retail shops and buy shank bones, rib tips, flank pieces and all anything that will make a boil, a stew, or work into a soup. The rapidly-increasing population of our cities is made up very largely of the laborers and operators from foreign countries a class of people who ate but very little meat in their own country many of them none at all. Increased wages, with an advantage in the price of meats here, compared to that in their own country, prompts them to eat meat; and this class of consumers alone absorb an enormous amount of the lower grades of meat every day.

Under the various demands, graduated by taste and purse, the retail butchers are enabled to assort their cuts as the grocer assorts his coffee, there being ready buyers for each grade—some cuts going as readily at twenty to twenty-five cents as others do at seven or eight cents. The canning of meats opens a market for such low grades of meat as hardly any butcher, no matter who his customers are, would tolerate upon his hooks. This trade being, as it is carried on, very profitable, enables cattle growers to close out unthrifty, thin, animals, getting, in the absence of any fat, the full market value for skin, shrunken muscles, tendon, bone and offal. The accumulation of this class of stock upon the farm affords a lesson that no observing farmer can fail to profit by, as he has had ample opportunity of seeing that he can no more grow good, profit-yielding meat upon the class of stock referred to, than a thrifty crop of corn upon a dry, sandy knoll.

If beef, to meet the demands of the lower grade of consumers and canners, could be produced at a cost in keeping with its selling value, then there would be some apology for growing it. The manufacturer makes a light article of cloth to meet the demand from a certain class of consumers. He weaves into this fabric cheap material, makes it light, and sells by the yard, in place of selling by the pound. As a rule, he is supposed to make a higher relative profit upon the low-priced goods. But, unfortunately for the farmer, he has no low-priced material to weave in. The grass that will grow and fatten a steer at three cents, will, with greater rapidity, grow one at six cents; and what is true of grass is equally true of grain feed.

Important Discoveries.

Among the Chaldean cylinders recently discovered by Mr. Rassam in the course of his excavations in Babylonia, and upon which Mr. Theophilus G. Pinches read a most interesting paper at a recent meeting of the London Society of Biblical Archæology, is one of the most remarkable yet found, by reason of the light it throws upon the ancient Chronology of the Chaldean Empire. It dates from the time of Nabonides, and records, among other things, that this sovereign, digging under the foundations of the Temple Sun God at Siparo, forty-five years after the death of King Nebuchadnezzar, came upon a cylinder of Naramsin, the son of Sargon, which no one had seen for "3200 years." This gives as the date of the ancient sovereign named 3,750 B. C. This, and the fact pointed out by Professor Oppert, who was present, that there was in those early days already "lively intercourse between Chaldea and Egypt," will have to be taken into account by future Bible critics. It is certain (says the Jewish World) somewhat to modify the vulgar conception—due in the first place to Dean Stanley—of Abraham, the founder of the Jews, as a wandering Arab Sheikh, a kind of nomad Bedouin as he exists in our day. The existence more than 5500 years ago of two highly civilized and highly cultivated Empires in Egypt and Chaldea; the fact that constant intercourse was going on between the two; again, that the high road between them led direct through Southern Palestine, and that Abraham was a native of the one great Empire and an honored visitor in the other, cannot but serve to modify in no slight degree our notions of the wandering sheikh to whom we own our origin. That he would have been unaffected by the culture in which he was born, and the rival civilizations between which he lived, is hardly likely. Altogether the discovery to which Mr. Pinches has called attention may open up a new field for investigation in the matter of Akkad and Akkadian civilization.

North Africa.

The territory of the Kroumirs in North Africa, a fertile country, rich in minerals and wood, became, after the French occupation, almost a desert, as the nomad tribes took flight. Steps were soon taken by the French to encourage European immigration, each immigrant being offered, free of charge, ground suitable to build a house upon, and five or six acres for cultivation. The result has already been that 250 families of various nationalities are established in the county on these conditions, while the number is increasing every day.

Clara Belle's Physician.

Clara Belle thus wrote in relation to thin pale women "My friend Laura found it pleasant to be thin and pale, because she is not striking beautiful, and in appearance was slowly fading away, like a broken lily. Thus she created an interest that she could not otherwise have enjoyed. Laura is a dear, good girl, and I point out this weakness solely because I mean to make her case an illustration of some things that my readers ought to know. When she found that her etherealness was likely to kill her, she made up her mind that she was a kind of lily that preferred to have her stalk strengthened up, so that she might bloom awhile longer. Therefore, she consented to go with me to my physician. He is a plain-spoken old fellow, and when I explained that Laura was not really sick, but only a drooper, a die-away, a languisher, he held her hand up between his eyes and the light and said: "There is no flesh and blood there—only skin and bone. She lacks vitality," Then he was informed, in answer to his questions, that she did not keep late hours, nor live exclusively on caramels, nor lace tightly, nor commit any other of the common female sins against health.

"The fact is," said the doctor, "that tight lacing is very rarely carried to an injurious extent nowadays, and late hours by women are usually followed by plenty of sleep in the day-time. The worst thing that fashionable women do, as a rule, is in changing from warm covering to nakedness. You go about all day enveloped in a sealskin sacque, which keeps you in a Turkish bath, opening every pore in your body, and then at night you go to a ball or party with your arms and part of your body bare. Colds are bound to follow."

Laura protested that she never wore decollete dresses, and the doctor might have guessed as much by her scrawniness, if he had used any sense outside of the medical line.

"How do you sleep?" he asked.

"Splendidly," she replied, "nine or ten hours without a dream; but when I awake I have a dreadful headache."

"What is your bedroom like?"

I had seen this prettiest of imaginable nests, and I chipped in with a description of it. Nothing could be wrong about the ventilation, I declared, for the windows were high and broad, and were left open over night. The bedstead was carved all over in solid rosewood; the mattress was filled with freshly curled hair and rested on springs; the linen was of the whitest and finest; the blankets were a gift from California, where the softest and warmest are made. The recollection of the down pillows threw me into rapturous praise of the undressed silk of which their coverings were made, and their elaborate embroidery. The edges were finished with fine silk cord, carefully avoiding anything that would keep the cushion in shape, for it was expected to yield and expand to every movement of the head. They were a little more than a half yard square, and covered with Indian silk of a crushed strawberry tint, on which were scattered designs in neatly worked darning stitches, taken close together, and the—

"Hold on," interposed the doctor; "you are not writing a fashion letter, just now. Have you ever seen Laura asleep in this wonderfully beautiful bed?"

"Yes, only yesterday morning."

"Where was her nose?"

"Let me see. Oh, yes; it was under the blankets."

"I always sleep that way," said Laura, "I cover my head when I get into bed, and it stays so all night."

"Probably that causes all the trouble," said the doctor. "You manage to ventilate your room properly, and then manage to breathe vitiated air for eight or ten hours every night. Stop it. Sleep with your head uncovered for a week, and then let me know how you feel."

She followed his advice, and at the end of a week felt first rate.

An Old Lamp.

A Japanese lamp, supposed to be twelve hundred years old, in the collection of the Mikado of Japan, is described by Dr. Christopher Dresser in his book on Japan, "In this lamp the oil is stored in the body of a rat, which sits upon the top of a pole. Half way down the pole and resting on a projecting bracket is a saucer, in the centre of which is a pin that connects it with the bracket on which it rests. In this saucer, and leaning over its side, is a wick. When the saucer is filled with oil and the wick is lit we have a lamp which exhibits no peculiar qualities till most of the oil has been consumed. Then suddenly a stream which suffices to replenish the now nearly exhausted saucer, issues from the mouth of the rat. The saucer being full, no more oil is discharged from the rat's mouth till it is again nearly empty, when the kind creature sitting 'up aloft' yields a further supply, and so on till its store of oil is exhausted. The manner in which this is achieved is simple, although the effect produced is curious, for it is only an application of the principle of the vent-peg or pipet, whereby fluid cannot run from a vessel unless air is admitted to take its place. The peg which rises in the centre of the saucer and attaches it to the support on which its rests terminates in a knob or cap; but the peg is hollow, and is connected with the body of the rat by a tube which runs along the bracket, and then ascends through the stand to the upper portion of the rat's body. The pin which stands in the centre of the saucer, it should be noticed, is perforated immediately below its cap, or about half an inch above the bottom of the saucer. It is obvious, then, that when the oil sinks to a point at which this hole is exposed air will enter, and thus allow the oil to run out of the rat's mouth; but when this hole is again covered by oil, no further air is admitted, and, therefore, no more oil can run from the rat's mouth."

—John Walford, age 103 years, voted at the recent election in Pike county, Ky.

McGroarty's Lunch.

Ex-Alderman McGroarty keeps a house of eating and drinking in Brooklyn. It is a feature of ex-Alderman McGroarty's management to place on the side table as early even as six o'clock in the morning a splendid free lunch. The writer saw this lunch and was amazed at its variety and substantiality. It consisted of a huge dish of olives, nicely vinegared, a dish of onions, ditto, a bowl of fresh crackers, one plate of corned beef in slices, and one plate of ham ditto.

"That is an excellent spread," said the reporter.

"Yes" answered McGroarty, complacently coming to the tabel bearing a huge dish of chicken salad fresh and juicy "Yes we always set a lunch every day, and this afternoon in addition there will be three big dishes of sandwiches and some clam-chowder."

"What's that, hey?" said a voice at the other end of the store, uttered by a man who had just entered."

He was a tall cadaverous-looking man in a seedy black coat and tall hat. "What's that, hey?"

"I say that we always set a lunch here," replied McGroarty, "and that this afternoon, beside this, we shall have three big dishes of sandwiches and some clam-chowder."

"Oh, indeed," said the long man. "Certainly; "a very good idea, indeed; very good." Saying which he walked to the counter and took up THE MORNING JOURNAL, but he didn't call for anything to drink.

Mr. McGroarty went behind the bar again and resumed his business of washing glasses, fixing up the bar, etc., etc. The tall man eyed him furtively for a moment or two, and then edged toward the side table. Presently the wooden fork was deep into the olives, then it plunged into the onions, anon into the chicken salad. As an additional relish he took an occasional nibble at the ham and beef, only by way of a refresher.

The proprietor didn't notice him. He was busy with his glasses and things, and was keeping up a desultory conversation with the reporter while still at work.

"You set quite a fine lunch here," said the tall man. "Oh, yes," said the unsuspecting McGroarty from the other end of the bar, "we find it pays to be liberal."

"Of course it does," said the other enthusiastically; "of course it does." With which he walked up to the lunch table and began again to ply his fork.

But McGroarty said nothing. He was as innocent as a child unborn of what was going on. "What time did you say the sandwiches came on?" said the tall man, looking up nervously at the clock. "Oh, in the afternoon some time."

"I'll drop in," said the tall man. "Yes, do," said McGroarty, giving an extra flourish to a beer glass, and holding it up to the light to see that there was not a speck on it.

"That's excellent ham," said the tall man, with a choice morsel at the end of his fork!

(He had got to the ham, now, exclusively. The vegetables had gone.)

"Yes, it is," answered McGroarty. "We always get our hams at the——" He stopped short. His eyes rolled all over the lunch table. His mouth opened. His ears flapped. His hair stood on end. He couldn't speak. His knees shook beneath him. He came round that counter like a rickety locomotive going round a bad curve. He glared at the tall man. "Sa-y!" said he, after recovering the power of speech.

"Where's those olives?" shouted McGroarty in an awful voice. The tall man smiled pleasantly. "Ha! ha!" he laughed, "Very good; very good, indeed. By Jove. Bunnell the museum man, would engage you."

"Bunnell be hanged!" roared McGroarty. "Where's the olives? where's the onions? where's——yes, by Jove," he screamed, as he noticed another absentee; "where's the beef?" with which he made a terrible rush at the long man's coat-tails, expecting that the viands were concealed about his person.

So they were, but not outside. The tall man bore the inspection with great calmness, sucking a piece of cracker out of a hollow tooth the while.

Then McGroarty fell back and assumed an oratorical attitude.

The tall man was evidently pained at Mr. McGroarty's agitation, and left precipitately.

"That settles it," said the ex-Alderman. "Not a scrap—not a smfter of anything to eat—does anybody get here after, this until the afternoon, if I lose all the trade I've got."

Various old friends of the proprietor have sought to change the propietor's mind, thus far, but without success.

Fond of Shrimps.

The bulletin of the United States fish commission for the last year contains an account of the shrimp fisheries of the Pacific coast, which are controlled almost entirely by the Chinese. The part of each day's catch which is not sold is carried to the Chinese quarter and there put at once into boiling brine. The shrimps are then spread out to dry upon level plats of smooth, bare ground. After four or five days they are crushed under large wooden pestles or trod upon by the Chinese in wooden shoes, for the purpose of loosening the meats from the outer chitinous covering; after which the entire mixture is put through a fanning mill, for the actual separation of the meats from the shells. About 200,000 pounds of shrimps are sold annually in San Francisco, and the annual exports of shrimp meats to China and the Sandwich Islands are valued at about $100,000. The meats are eaten by all classes in China, but they are cheaper and less esteemed than the native shrimps, which are said to be compararively scarce.

Pattison's Victory.

The supreme court of the state has sustained the decision of the lower court in the contest for the controllership of Philadelphia. Thus the legal position taken by Governor Pattison in the appointment of Mr. Page has been completely and thoroughly vindicated.

It will be remembered that the republicans of the senate were at first disposed to resist the confirmation of Mr. Page on the ground that the Governor had no authority to make an appointment. Immediately the anti-democratic press began to sneer at what they denominated the governor's "mistake." But he laughs best who laughs last.

The fact is that the opposition to Mr. Page came from a clique of self-seeking politicians who were not suited by that gentleman's reform record. They preferred a controller who would have been more easily moulded to their purposes. It is doubtful if the matter would ever have reached the courts if some one acceptable to those political jobbers had received the appointment.

Governor Pattison has done his whole duty in this matter, and has done it wisely and well. He knew his ground from the beginning and held it firmly and unflinchingly. The "mistake" was not his but that of the scheming clique whish opposed him. The outcome is a victory for the cause of honest government represented by an honest governor.

Mr. Kennedy's bill requiring a list of the voters who have paid their taxes to be posted in a conspicuous place thirty days before an election would, if passed and rigidly enforced, reduce fraudulent voting to a minimum. It would, of course, entirely do away with the present practice by which political committees purchase tax receipts by the wholesale thirty days before the day of election and hand them to voters on their way to the polls.

SENATOR LANTZ'S MOVE.

Public Institutions to Give an Account of their Stewardship.

The intention of Governor Pattison to bring about a reform in the manner certain public institutions employ to draw the money granted them by legislative appropriation from the state treasury is supplemented by a resolution of Senator Lantz, of Lebanon, presented in the senate last evening. The views of the governor were given at length in the Patriot of Monday. The resolution passed is as follows:

Resolved, That all institutions and organizations, whether charitable, benevolent or otherwise, asking for appropriations for the state that have not already done so, be and they are hereby requested to lay, in written or printed form, before the senate and each individual senator, an itemized account under oath, of the actual annual expenditures for the years 1881 and 1882, of such institutions claiming said appropriations, and that unless this is done no appropriation shall be reported.—Patriot, Feb. 22nd.

Rev. J. J. Hamilton a Presbyterian minister of Perry county, and others, sent a petition to the legislature favoring the adoption of the whipping post in this state for the punishment of certain crimes. The document sets forth that crimes of various grades are committed and repeated and the public generally are made to suffer by reason of expenses incurred at these trials. It argues that if the individual who commits a crime should be made to suffer personal corporeal punishment the whipping post would meet the requirements and the crime would not be likely to be repeated, while the community would be saved the expense of supporting prisoners.

Senator Smiley presented the petition in the Senate last week.

Some politicians and newspapers, remarks the Altoona Tribune, are sneering at the effort now being made to secure constitutional prohibition of the liquor trafic in this state, on the ground that the only people who are interesting themselves in the matter are a few fanatical political prohibitionists. That is just where they are mistaken. There are scores of men in this country who never voted for a prohibitionist in their lives who are intensely interested in the success of this amendment. There are scores of others who patronize the rumshops and who would naturally be supposed to be on the side of the saloon keepers who will cast a ballot for legal prohibition if given the opportunity. We do not say this without knowledge. We have it from the men themselves.

The Present Terrific floods in the North American rivers should serve to point to a very emphatic moral. The devastation of forests has much to do with these mighty torrents which sweep irresistibly everything before them that can be floated. Pennsylvania is fast losing her once famous forests from two principal causes—the greedy lumberman and tanner and the summer forest fire. It is time our legislators adopted the most stringmen legal measures to preserve as far as possible the forests still remaining. New York is waking up at last to this important subject and is now proposing to make a public park of the Adirondack region and put a stop to the lumber-stripping process which has so long prevailed in that region. While such a plan is not feasible in this State, much may yet be done to prevent the entire denudation of our forest counties in the central and northwestern part of the State, which furnish the sources of the Susquehana and Allegheny rivers. Whatever can be done in this direction should have promt attention.—Times.

MOYER'S MOURNFUL MURMURINGS.

His Grief Deepens as the End draws Near.

Hopeless, Sick and Miserable.

Uriah Moyer is complaining of ill-health and loss of appetite. As the time approaches for his excution his calmness vanishes and at times he becomes so nervous that Rev. Spangler, his spiritual adviser, must be sent for, whose presence, like a magic wand, calms the miserable man's fears, and from whose society he seems to reap a great deal of comfort. He has made a full and complete confession to Mr. Spangler. Whatever portion of the confession that will be made public will come through the regular issue or supplement of the Post, hence our readers can rest assured that they will not be neglected. Mr. Spangler has the entire matter in hand and we trust in his ability to make a proper disposal of the same.

The doomed man in his outbursts of grief frequently exclaims: O, if I only had had one good man to give me advice this would never have happened. I was tempted and in my ignorance could not realize the fearful consequences of my transgressions. If I could be allowed to live I would willingly work all the days of my life for the people I have offended. The governor has given me this short respite, can he not now save my life that I may make amends for what I have done?" While in these fits of grief he presents a most pitiful sight, and it would require the heart of a Nero to remain untouched with pity.

The preparation of the gallows which are in the basement of the Court House, will require but a few day's work when all will be ready. They are the same on which Jonathan, Uriah's brother was hung, and their erection will be immediately out side of the culprit's window. Nobody can realize the misery the man feels, and the erection of the gallows and preparation for the hanging will drive still further the arrows of remorse into the poor man's soul.—Middleburg Post.

Colonies Going West.

Emigration from along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad promises to be on an extensive plan this spring, and the favored country is the land of the Dakotas and Montanas. Colonies are forming at Newville and Carlisle, of farmers who have engaged to take up sections in the new northwest near Fargo and Bismark. A colony of 150 will leave Lewistown by the middle of March and another from Millersburg of 150 go about the same time. A party is organizing at Benfor and near every day the sound of preparation is heard in the country districts. Sections of land never trodden by the foot of man will be made the location for many new homes by Pennsylvanians in Dakota this year.

—W. R. Camp is the new squire for Potter township.

—Small pox has appeared in White Deer Valley, Lycoming county.

—If you did not trim your grape vines in the fall it is a good time to do it now.

—Rev. L. C. Edmonds expects to leave Snyder county in April for Clarion Co., Pa.

FOR SALE.—Rev. C. F. Deininger offers his valuable property in Millheim at private sale. For particulars inquire of H. K. Luse, on the premises. tf

—A red and black barred comfort was found in front of the JOURNAL office which the owner can have by calling.

—Mr. Jared Harper, of Bellefonte, formerly of Aaronsburg, goes into business with Henry Teats. Groceries will be their speciality.

—"There's music in the air"—the papers in Centre county are on a rampage war path. Let the band play the variations.

ERRATUM.—W. C. Hubler was elected constable of Penn township, and not Daniel Kerstetter as erroneously stated in the last week's JOURNAL.

—The Lutheran Ladies' Mite Society will hold its next monthly meeting on Monday evening. Let there be a full attendance. SECRETARY.

—Uncle Edward Tuten scolds the JOURNAL and the Reporter for making mouths at each other. Don't now, Uncle, let us boys have a little fun once in a while. You were young too, one day, and besides that if you interfere you might get hurt.

—Mr. John Yarger, of Hartleton, has a book entitled, "The American Instructor or Young Man's Best Companion." It was "printed in Philadelphia by B. Franklin and D. Hall, at the new printing office in Market st., 1742." It has lessons in it in spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, &c., and the lessons are given in good and easy form. In authorship, printing, type setting, binding, it could be copied after profitably by the present generation.

—The valuable property known as Wolfe's Store, in Brush Valley will be offered at public sale by the administrator of Thomas Wolfe, deceased, Tuesday, March 6th. A fine chance for an active, enterprising business man. Sale to begin at one o'clock sharp, of said day. ts

—J. A. Limbert is really one of the most accommodating and reliable fellows that ever drove a stage. Throughout the year he carries a very large amount of express goods all along the route, and delivers them in person.

Everything is always right and his charges are really moderate. You can safely entrust our business to him. tf

—Our thanks are due and hereby tendered to that prince of clever fellows, Mr. HOUDAN ROTE, of Aaronsburg, for several days' timely help. The JOURNAL office is so thronged with jobs that our hands are over worked. Dan is a disciple of the HON. FREDERICK KURTZ, and therefore a very old boss at the printing business and a regular jack-of-all-trades besides—handy at almost anything. 'Tis a mackerel fact.

ATTENTION FARMERS!—The subscriber would respectfully inform his many customers that he is engaged in manufacturing the celebrated KEYSTONE CULTIVATOR, as well as Land Rollers and Farming Implements generally. He uses only the best material and sells at the lowest prices. Orders respectfully solicited.

9-3t R. B. HARTMAN.

—After changing the name of his paper for at least half a dozen times, Mr. Kurtz at last returns to his first love and again designates his "great and good Reporter" by the appropriate, time-honored title 'Schmutzblatt.' That's the most sensible thing Freddy did this long time. Hope he will stick to it and be happy for once.

—THE ORIENTAL CASKET, full of literary gems, is one of the best periodicals out. L. Lum Smith, the publisher makes it a point to employ only the best and ablest editors and contributors and at the same time enables everybody to take his paper charging only $1.00 per year. THE CASKET is issued monthly at 912 Arch St., Philadelphia, where it can be had by addressing the editor, EMERSON BENNET.

—The musical convention last week nearly broke up Mr. Morrison's school. For several days only six to eight pupils were present. We very much doubt whether it is good policy for parents to permit their children to miss a week's school in order to attend a musical convention. It may however be a debatable question, and it would be well for those concerned to consider the matter.

—The musical convention last week was well patronized by our people and well attended by singers from other parts, although several big guns advertised did not put in their appearance. The results we understand are entirely satisfactory to the committee.

It is to be hoped that the practice and cultivation of vocal music will not cease with the close of the convention season, but that the people composing the choirs and singers of the several churches will carry into practical use what they have learned.

ENOUGH OF IT.—We have noticed the following slanderous little item in several Union county papers and will stand it no longer. Why men, we have no Jacob Zuddering nor yet a Clear Creek in all Centre county, and even our calves have more sense than to get lost. We much suspect that the notice was found posted up somewhere near Lewisburg, say in the vicinity of the University grounds:

This is the way a Centre county man advertised a lost calf: "Round away—1 Red and vite caf. His tu be hind legs vas plack, he was a she caf. Enipotti vat prings him back pais 5 tollars. Jacob Zuddering, Clear Creek, dree miles behind the pridge.

—Last week's Reporter was so poorly printed that we could only partially decipher the little article intended for our benefit. Guess Freddy must have used a poor quality of tar instead of printer's ink. However we did manage to make out such words as "old Wiggins," "thrash," "soap," "ten commandments," and "candy." What a strange mixture of terms. See if we cannot get them into some sort of connection. The soap he badly needs himself. In fact it would boom the market instantly if he would buy just the one half he ought to use. Candy? No, please excuse Jumbo. You will need all the taffy you can get the next time you run for 'semly—and even then you may not have enough to make it reach. Thrash—that word rather gets us. Can't make out whether Freddy intends to use it in the active or passive voice. Guess he don't know himself, and we waive the thrashing in either case. Ten commandments—well here is something tangible. Right glad, Freddy made up his mind to give that some attention. It is rather a late day for him to begin, but he no doubt thinks "better late than never." Hope he will not allow himself to become diverted by Jumbo, and "you fellows over the mountain." Old Wiggins—not in the dictionary. Guess it must be the name of some old style Swiss watch. No—thank you. If you really wish to do something nice for a poor brother editor, get up a subscription for a chronometer watch, worth say about $300. Then we will have a big time of it at the Brockerhoff, not forgetting to invite brother Meek, brother Fury and all them fellows over there. You may make the presentation speech, we the reply—we have considerable practice in speaking to each other you know. But of course you must be a little more liberal than you were on other subscriptions. What next?

BOUND OVER.—A man who has passed the meridian of life but whose name we forbear to mention out of sympathy for his family, was brought before esquire Eisenhuth on Monday morning, on a charge of disturbing a religious meeting on Sunday night, and bound over to answer at court, in the sum of $200. Why was it that a man of that age, otherwise harmless and inoffensive, should so far forget himself as to misbehave in church? It is the old story over again for the thousandth time—rum was at the buttom of it. But how and where did he get it, the liquor, and on Sunday? No doubt he knows and the man who gave it to him. Reputable citizens do not know, for they have no time to spend and loaf around at places where liquor is sold, and least of all on Sundays. The man will no doubt be punished pretty severely when he comes to court, but will the liquor seller also be punished for his violation of the laws both of God and man?

Der Bensh und der Fritz.

"O wad some Power the gift tie gie us
To see oursels as others see us;
It wad frae monie a blunder free us!
An' foolish notion."

Recently an attache of the JOURNAL office made a visit to a friend during which substantially the following tete-a-tete took place. For convenience we will call the friend Judge, a very fitting name, though not in an official sense. Our man we designate as Reporter, for that surely sounds hifalutin enough, while the hired man present may figure as Sam.

TETE-A-TETE.

Reporter. Good day, Judge, glad to see you. For some time I was anxious to escape for a day from incessant work and business, and spend the time at your hospitable home in quiet rest and easy conversation.

Judge. Right glad to see you, Mr. Reporter. Welcome. It is a real relief, once in a while to receive a visitor simply as a visitor—I mean one that has no business to harrass and vex a fellow. Come in and feel at home. Sam, put Mr. Reporter's horse away, and see to it that he is well cared for.

Sam. Trust me for that, boss. But may I be an auditor at your conference?

J. Yes, Sam, There is nothing urgent for you to do, you may come in. Well, Mr. Reporter, what's new in Millheim? You must have had quite lively times over the Holiday season?

R. Yes, and even before and since. The dedication—the festival—several musical conventions—concerts and what not, have given us such a continuous round of festivities that a fellow is glad to get out into the country occasionally, to enjoy the calm influences of rural solitude.

J. Yes, yes, I see. Millheim is a city in all but size and population. It always was a fussy town and does its best to keep up the old-time reputation. But how is our friend Ben? I see the JOURNAL and the Reporter are making the fur fly quite lively.

R. Ben is well and cheerful, only a little overworked sometimes. His many trades keep him very busy.

J. I am really surprised that Ben plunged into such an ugly and protracted fight with Kurtz. It is not his usual style, for he has a peaceable disposition. Nor do I see for the life of me what all it is good for.

R. Don't judge Ben too harshly. He has suffered Freddy's coarse and vulgar abuse, as well as his mean, low flings and insinuations ever since he (Ben) took charge of the old Berichter. Fred never darkened the door of the JOURNAL office; never had a kind word for us at any time, but always and in every way tried to injure and belittle the JOURNAL with all that hangs around and about it. Why Judge, if I would go into details and tell you of the low tricks and dark ways he resorts to to get all the printing of our county officers; the contemptible means he uses to get jobbing, advertising and subscribers, you would be surprised. Besides this Freddy as usual began this fight by a far-fetched and unprofessional attack on Ben's political status. Freddy is clearly the aggressor, while Ben is on the defensive.

S. I think however that Ben has completely turned the tables and thrown Fritzy on the defensive. Ben is dedidedly the upper dog in the fight, thus far, and not likely to lose his place.

J. What both of you say may all be true. I know that much of it is true, and yet I can not exactly justify Ben. Both are men of some prominence by reason of their positions as editors, and might employ their talents more profitably than by throwing mud at each other. The cause of morality which both pretend to advance, (to say nothing of religion) must certainly suffer by such a course. Don't you think so too?

R. To come down to fundamental principles Judge, you are about right. But waiving that point, who do you think has the best of the fight, as far as the returns are in?

J. As far as that is concerned there is no question that Ben is many lengths ahead in the race. There is some force in his articles, while in sarcasm and irony Kurtz is no match for him at all. Ben has fired some solid shot broadsides squarely into the hulk of the Reporter, which Kurtz vainly tries to dodge by his usual dull and pointless wit.

S. He simly hisses "sausages" and "ponhoss" lolls "Solomon" and grunts "Jumbo." These are his heavy arguments—his masterly defense. But this is exactly on a par with his general style. His editorials are the merest relnash of other men's ideas, and remind me of an old cow chewing the cud—the same thing over and over. A fellow might read "the great and good" Reporter for years without becoming one whit the wiser or better for it; and what he no doubt considers fine wit is simply nauseating stuff. Fritzy should never soar above the very plainest and simplest style, for example something like the school boy's first composition: "Ide ruther be an ox nor a horse."

J. You seem to have a rather low opinion of Kurtz's editorial abilities, Sam.

S. Certainly I have. He never should have tried to edit a paper. Nature has denied him even the primary qualifications and as to his acquired attainments they are hardly worth mentioning. Some such trade as shoemaker—rather cobbler—would have been better suited to his mental capacity.

J. But why particularly cobbling?

S. Well, he would have a big advantage over the common average of cobblers.

J. and R. What advantage?

S. Why he would never need to buy any bristles. Whenever in need of them he could just reach on his back any time and pull them out.

R. That will do, Sam, you may take the prize!

J. But what is the real cause, Mr. Reporter, of the deep animosity between Kurtz and Ben?

R. Business jealousy—"Handwerksneid"—is at the bottom of it all. Freddy's grasping covetousness is boundless. He thinks "the great and good Reporter" should have all the county printing, all the job work, all the "circulation." He actually shed tears on a certain occasion, on falling as he sometimes does, to get a certain job of county printing. The JOURNAL is in his way and is constantly growing in public favor. That's what hurts and bothers Freddy more than Ben's politics. He thinks by continually howling "abolitionist," "republican," "hater of democracy," he can bring odium on the JOURNAL and injure its business. These are the frozen facts in the case.

J. 'Tis a real pity that Penn's Valley isn't large enough to hold two such big men as Kurtz and Ben. Kurtz had better buy out some such paper as the New York Herald or the Philadelphia Times. It would afford him a wider scope for his brilliant talents, to say nothing of an immense "circulation."

R. Yes, it is only a few weeks ago that Freddy spoke of "such important papers as the REPORTER and the N. Y. Herald!"

J. Ben should not be quite so sensitive of Kurtz's flings about his democracy. The people are not quite such fools as to ostracise a man a life time for having honestly followed another party. Why just look at Gov. Curtin's case. He was the republican Governor for six successive years, and gave the democrats many a hard hit, and yet Centre county last fall gave him the unprecedented majority of over 1700, while Pattison had only 879. There are many similar cases in recent years, only less stricking, perhaps.

(Concluded next week.)

—We are obliged to issue the JOURNAL a day ahead of time this week in order to fulfill the requirements of the law, which provides that the county statement shall be circulated four times in February. Glad that the statements are out.

—Look out for the March storms!

News Miscellany.

The total receipts of the Berks county treasurer last year aggregated $262,575,95, and the disbursements $254,683.51. That's a healthy old county.

The old Conewango bridge, swept from its foundations at Warren by the floods, drifted to Rising Sun, Ohio, in five days. The distance of 765 miles.

The Treasurer of Clearfield county one day last week received a check for $600, marked "conscience money from some unknown conscience struck individual."

But one prisoner in the Greene county jail. The county is out of debt and has an $18,000 surplus in its treasury. A happy county and a blessed people, truly.

Jacob Jonhson, of York, owns a powder mill seven miles away. The other day Mrs. Johnson sent their setter dog to the mill bearing an order for some powder. The dog made the seven miles in one hour.

Eighteen years ago two knives were stolen from Peter Fishel's store in York. Last Saturday a man called at the store and paid two dollars for the knives. He said that his conscience had troubled him for eighteen years.

Two sharpers beat farmers of Clarion and Armstrong counties out of $14,000 by getting them to sign a lease of land, the concluding portion of which was a judgement note. The notes were afterward disposed of.

The citizens of Lock Haven are making a bold move to have the car works and machine shops of the Susquehanna & Southwestern railroad located in that city. A committee of business men have started out to raise $50,000 for this purpose.

During the late cold weather a branch of the Allegheny river near Coudersport, Potter County, was frozen solid to the bottom. Whole schools of speckled trout were caught in the ice, and were dug out by farmers and shipped to Buffalo.

While Warren Brachington, of Elk Hill, Warren county, was chopping down a large pine stump a few days ago, he found near the top of the stump at least a bushel of rattlesnake eggs and a dozen rattlesnake skins. He saved a skin five feet in length and burned the eggs.

John Clements Ralston, foreman in a Millwaukie soap factory, has fallen heir to half of an Irish estate valued at something over $3,000,000. Search for him in the northwest has been making for ten years, and his discovery is due to reporter's stories growing out of three letters of inquiry received by Mayor Stowell.

By the explosion of a kerosene lamp in a farm house on Presido creek, twelve miles from Brackett, Texas, four children of ages varying from two to seven years, were burned to death, and their mother, Mrs. Michael McDonald, who was alone in the house with them, was compelled to witness the scene, the flames having cut her off from the children's room.

Mr. Blackburn said there are 205 saloons in Shenandoah, and only eighty of them are licensed. He also said that Shenandoah was the Gomorah of Schuylkill county, and that Schuylkill county was the banner whiskey county of this State. This is a terible statement, and yet its truth can scarcely be denied, though there are towns and counties in other parts of the State that are not far behind.

Judge Elwell, of Columbia county, in a case of the Commonwealth vs. David Hollingshead for illegal fishing, holds that an outline is not a permanently set means of taking fish and therefore not indictable under the act of June 3, 1878, but adds, for the purpose of preventing misapprehension, that if any bass, pike or pickerel are caught in any other manner than with rod, hook and line, the person is liable to a penalty.

A GOOD TIME.—A cotemporary says this: The duties of a President are not resting very heavily upon Mr. Arthur just now. Congress is not passing any bills for him to sign, and he has postponed making any appointments until the Federal Legislature adjourns. He therefore has nothing to do but enjoy himself, and he appears to be taking advantage of the opportunity to gratify his ambition to shine as a social star, and in putting in his time at fifty thousand a year, whereas it might have been less than five.

The law of public sales is as follows: In sale by auction there are three parties, viz: The owner of the property to be sold, the auctioneer, and a portion of the public. The articles must be sold without reserve, and unless the vendor reserve one bid he cannot bid himself or have the auctioneer or any one else bid for him. There are cases on record where a bid was not reserved, and the vendor had a bidder who bought it in, and afterward suit was brought against the vendor by the highest bidder for the article, and it was decided that he, the plaintiff, was the highest outside bidder entitled to the article against the vendor. So, also, if any article is struck off to a person, and it is afterward ascertained that the vendor or auctioneer practiced fraud, by bidding himself, or had puffers, it was held both by the courts of England, and so repeatedly decided by the Supreme Court of Peunsylvania, that the purchaser could not be held, but the purchaser as soon as he discovers the fraud practiced on him must return or tender the article to the vendor.

Last Saturday as Tom Devinney was on his way to Clearfield with the Penfield stage he noticed a pile of snow that appeared to be larger than the usual drifts around. Being of curious turn of mind Tom alighted and proceeded to investigate. Giving the snow pile a kick a hole was made and before Tom could retreat 319 pheasants flew out of the snow bank, scaring him so badly that he could scarcely count the flying birds. The birds had evidently been cooped in the snow tent all winter, but aside from being slightly thin they looked well and hearty.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

MARRIED.

On the 22nd ult., at the residence of the bride's parents, Clarion, Illinois, Mr. G. W. Keene, late of Millheim, Pa., to Miss Susan Bower, daughter to Mr. J. H. Bower.

On the 20th ult., at Aaronsburg, by Rev. Z. A. Yearick, Mr. Ralph E. Stover and Miss Maggie M. Stover, both of Haines township.

On the same day by the same, at the residence of Mr. B. W. Boyer, near Madisonburg, Mr. Cyrus N. Philips, of Lake, Stark Co., Ohio, and Miss Lucy C. Weagley, of Miles township.

AGRICULTURE.

FIFTY MILLIONS LOST BY INSUFFICIENT FEEDING.—Chief Statistician Dodge, of the Agricultural Department, made a report last spring upon the spring condition of farm stock. The most suggestive portion of the report relates to the investigation of the gain or loss resulting from the winter's feed of cattle. The question was whether the manure left represented the net profit of the forage supplied at so great cost. The following conclusions were deduced from the facts and opinions of stock growers in all parts of the country: 1. A considerable percentage of stock fed actually lose in flesh and weight. 2. Another large fraction maintain their weight and add to bone and size of frame, but decrease in flesh. 3. A small proportion make increase of weight. 5, 10, 20 or 30 per cent. depending upon comfortable shelter and amount and variety of food. Those farmers who fail to shelter stock, who stint their forage supply or give innutritious material, make no gain in flesh, and often lose in condition and weight, as well as in capacity for the more profitable result of pasturage in the following summer. The contest between such results and the experience of skilled feeders is strikingly shown "The difference lies between a current habit of neglect and a thrifty custom of systematic feeding for flesh." It is shown that the saving of a moderate margin of this wide difference, say a hundred pounds during the season, at the low estimate of $3, would be an equivalent to fifty millions of dollars for that portion of our cattle that are fed in winter.

FARM GATES.—Have as few gates as possible. Each one is an expense in its construction and subsequent care. It never pays to make a poor gate. The frame should be constructed of hard and lasting wood, with the slats of light but durable material. This gate needs thorough bracing with strips of wood, or better, rods of iron, which run from the bottom of the latch and to the top of the hinge-end. A gate thus braced cannot sag, as it is impossible for it to get out of the rectangular form. When finished the gate should be painted. The farm gate should be wide enough to permit the free passage of loads of hay and grain, rollers, and harvesters.

A most important point is a large, durable and well-set post, upon which the gate is to be hung. The hinge-post should not be less than eight inches square, and set at least 3½ feet deep. The earth needs to be rammed firmly around the post. A first-class gate is expensive at the outset, but needs very little attention afterwards for several years.

LILIES.—A ten-inch pot is not too large for a lily bulb. The bulb should be planted deep, having an inch or an inch and a half of soil over the very top of it. and it is better that the top soil be lighter than the rest, to allow the stem to push through easily. When filled, the soil should be an inch below the top of the rim of the pot, to allow for watering. The potted bulbs are to be set away in the cellar, the same as already described, but it will be much longer before they are ready to bring out; this will be in the spring, when they show the green stem pushed up out of the soil.

CORN-STALK FUEL.—An Iowa farmer, who has both coal and wood on his farm, warms his house with corn-stalks, and claims that they make the best and cheapest fuel he can get. He uses a large stove, and burns the stalks in tightly bound bundles, weighing about forty pounds each. A bundle burns three hours (without flame) in an air-tight stove. The large stove offers so much radiating surface that it does not need to be very hot. Five bundles a day, or 600 for the winter, suffice to keep the stove going and the room warm

DR. N. H. PAAREN, of Chicago, State Veterinary Surgeon, is taking active steps to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among the cattle of that State, his efforts being especially directed against pleuro-pneumonia, which is playing havoc among the cattle of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland. The penalty for importing cattle into Illinois from these infested districts is very heavy and will probably have the desired effect.

EVERY practical dairyman knows full well the importance of taking proper care of his cows. It matters not how well the other branches of the dairy are cared for; unless the fountain head, the cows themselves, are managed with a proper regard to their best care, there will surely be a deficit in the returns of the dairy at the end of the season.

CORN.—Steeping corn in strong solution of salt-petre twenty-four to forty-eight hours before planting is said to be a protection against mice, squirrels and worms. Copperas in strong solution is also recommended. As protection against worms mix half a pint of boiling tar to each peck of corn; stir briskly.

A COLD cow is the picture of misery, and a sure evidence of no profit. For this reason the cow stable should be got in readiness to receive the inmates the cold nights that come so suddenly and unawares in the fall. There is no point in the dairy of equal importance to that of keeping the cows well fed and warm.

A COLD, damp, airy temperature will cause animals to consume more food without corresponding result in bone, muscle, flesh, or fat, much being used in keeping up warmth.

A GOOD guide for a safe quantity of grain per day to maturing cattle is one pound to each hundred of their weight; thus an animal weighing 1,000 pounds may receive ten pounds of grain.

SPIDERS.—When these infest house plants sponging the leaves on both sides and syringing the plants so that the water is thrown on the under as well as upper sides of the leaves, will be effectual.

ON an average it costs, on charging every possible item, twelve cents for every additional pound added to the weight of a two or three year old fattening beast.

No cattle beast whatever will pay for the direct increase to its weight from the consumption of any kind or quantity of food, the manure must be properly valued.

IN this country the market value of store cattle can be increased thirty-six per cent. during six months of the fattening finish.

IMMEDIATELY when an animal begins to fret for food, immediately it begins to lose flesh; never check the fattening process.

IN using roots it is one guide to give just so much; in association with other things, so that the animal may not take any water.

CHAMOIS leather is an excellent material for decorative purposes. It takes color well, and is besides so soft and pliable that it can be very readily embroidered; in addition to this it answers well for designs in dry color.

DOMESTIC.

WARTS do not penetrate deeper than the skin. There are some caustics that will remove them, extirpation with the knife or scissors is better. When the wart is very small it may be clipped effectively close to the skin with a pair of clipping-shears and the parts touched with lunar caustic. When the pedicle or stem is of considerable size a strong ligature of sadler's silk, well waxed, should be passed firmly round the wart at its very base and the ends of the silk tied in a manner so that the ligature can be readily tightened daily. All means of nutriment being thus destroyed the wart or tumor will in a very short time be killed and drop off. Where the warts are large or in large clusters similar to a bunch of grapes it will facilitate their removal to cast or fasten the animal by means of a strong twitch and extirpate them close to the skin by means of a sharp knife or clipping shears; the base or roots should then be slightly scared with a hot iron to prevent the wart from growing again. They may also be treated in the following manner: Take a common suture-needle, arm it with a double ligature, each consisting of three threads of sadler's twine well waxed, pass the needle through the centre of the wart, as close down to the skin as possible, tie each half of the thread with a surgeon's or weaver's knot as tightly as the knot can be tied, then cut the ends off middling close to the knot, and in a short time the wart will drop off. If the exposed surfaces should not heal satisfactorily, moisten them occasionally with equal parts of tincture of aloes and myrrh. If any disposition is manifested in the parts to ulcerate, sprinkle them with equal parts of finely pulverized charcoal and blood root. All warts can be very readily removed by the means herein described.

CHICKEN GRAVY.—Of course you have kept your dripping pan with sufficient water to prevent drying or burning while roasting your fowl. There should be from half a pint to a pint when the turkey or chicken is done. This should be set on the stove and tipped, so that one end of the pan is near dry. Into this corner put a piece of butter the size of an egg, and as it melts rub into it a large spoonful of flour, then mix with gravy and bring to a boil. Add the heart, liver, etc., which have previously been chopped fine. Salt if necessary, and send hot to the table. This way of mixing the flour and butter together is the greatest possible improvement on the ordinary method of mixing the flour in water, and pouring in to the boiling gravy. Flour should be used in this way in making of all gravies, using the fat baked from beef, pork etc., (when no butter is needed) to mix with the flour in the end of the dripping-pan and boiling as for turkey gravy.

HERE is an excellent recipe for the foundation of all kinds of fruit fritters. Make a batter of half a pint of sweet milk, ten ounces of flour and two ounces of butter; sweeten and flavor to suit your taste, The whites of two eggs well beaten are to be stirred in last, or to make variety, you can sometimes use both the yolks and whites. Stir the chopped fruit in this batter, and fry in hot lard, dropping it by spoonfuls; or you can dip the fruit in the batter and fry. The first time you try this weigh the ingredients; after that it will not be necessary if you are, like most cooks, "good at guessing."

EMBROIDERY UPON LEATHER.—The finest kid is usually chosen for this work, and the patterns are the same as for embroidery in satin stitch. The design is traced upon the material, and small holes pricked with a stiletto for the needle to pass through; but occasionally such materials can be bought ready for working. The design must be carried out in satin-stitch in colored filoselles, and when the work is finished the leather must be pasted upon thin linen to keep it from splitting. Fashionable gloves with gauntlets are embroidered in this way in monogram, crests and fanciful designs.

ALMOND CANDY.—Boil slowly one pound of white sugar and a coffee cupful of water one-half hour; clear with the white of an egg; test it by raising up a spoonful of the syrup, and if the thread snaps it is done. Next stir in a cupful of almond meats, blanched and chopped, and pour into buttered tins, when nearly cold, divide into narrow strips with a knife.

WATER CAKE.—Take four cupfuls of sifted flour. two cupfuls of white sugar, half a cupful of butter, two eggs and one cupful of water. Turn the water over the butter and stir the sugar into it. Add the egg well beaten. Dissolve a small teaspoonful of saleratus in a little boiling water, and stir it in; mix two small teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar with the flour and add the other ingredients. Flavor with lemon.

CUSHIONS for deep, cane chairs are made tufted plush or satin, and as an accompaniment a strip of the same material and color is embroidered as a scarf for the back and finished off with deep fringe, which is often of rich quality.

BRAIDING is to become popular again. Rounded soutache will be used, as the designs can be executed in raised work by its use. It is easy to give Eastern effects by carrying out a free design upon muslin, scrim, or thin materials of any kind.

ODDLY shaped tables are much in demand. Some of them are round and low enough to reach a lady's elbows as she sits at work and are rotary. Others are round in front and straight at the back, and are supported upon half recumbent figures.

COCOANUT CREAM CANDY.—Three cupfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a cup of water and three-fourths of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Boil ten minutes; when nearly cool add a cup of grated cocoanut; beat to a cream and spread on paper.

CRYSTAL is gaining favor. Most beautiful centre-pieces for the lunch tables are in vogue, deeply cut in this material. and a new shape has superseded the globular. It is not unlike a crescent.

THE table d'oyleys are now often embroiderod in the centre only. An initial letter is frequently selected, and within a fanciful or grotesque figure is carried out in raised dotted embroidery.

IRIDESCENT mother-of pearl is much used now for bouquet holders, fan-holders, &c. It is often richly carved, but still more frequently inlaid with gold and silver.

THE fashionable table lamp to-day is mounted upon a beautifully painted vase of spheroid form; and is often of very great value, choice porcelain being selected for this purpose.

HUMOROUS.

THE use of a knowledge of French: Miss Lilirouge, who has "learned" French, was saying the other day that she found it quite convenient, while in a public conveyance, to speak French when she wished to say something that she didn't wish everybody to understand. "Why," said she, "last evening I talked in French to sister Millie all the way home." "Did you?" said Fogg. "But how do you know that there were not some people in the car who understood French?" "Oh, that wouldn't matter," remarked Millie; "they wouldn't have understood sister. Even I had to guess what she meant and you know I am quite familliar with her French."

"Humanity's great hope for the future is alone to be realized in improved conditions of matrimony. What a profound obligation does this fact involve! Those who realize the responsibility can hardly do better than take advice from Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham whose wonderful remedies for the cure of all diseases peculiar to women are so justly celebrated. A MISSING hand: You have driven horses a great deal, haven't you, George, dear?" said a girly voice from the depths of a $350 sealskin sacque last night. "Oh, yes," replied George, chirping to his trotter, "I flatter myself that I can handle a horse about as well as the next one." "Do you think you could drive with one hand without any danger of the horse running away?" came softly through the night air. An hour later we noticed George driving with one hand and it looked very dangerous, but not that the horse ran away; oh, no, i deed; the "danger" was of a different kind.

IN childhood's happy hours: "Ah, dear old grandmother!" said a lady. "How good she was to the children! And how credulous! One day while we were playing we broke a great lot of dishes. It was a terrible wreck. When grandma got home she was very angry. 'Grandma,' said we, "it wasn't us, grandma; it was that bad, careless cat; we saw her.' Then grandmashe grabbed the poor cat and such a terrific beating as she gave that innocent creature I hope no other cat may ever suffer! Poor pussy! Dear old grandma!"

Harrassing Dreams.—An unnatural excitement of the brain and nervous system is the direct cause of sleeplessness, as also of harrassing nocturnal dreams. Vegetine has a peculiarly soothing effect in all such cases, when taken just before going to bed

ANOTHER iconoclast has arisen to inform the world that there were no apples in Switzerland at the time Tell shot the fruit off his son's head. Perhaps William's alleged apple was a pumpkin.

Kidney Complaints.

DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS.

The symptoms of an acute attack of inflammation of the kidneys are as follows: Fever, pain in the small of the back, and thence shooting downward; numbness of the thighs, vomiting, usually at first a deep red color of the urine, which becomes pale and colorless as the disease increases, and is discharged very often with pain and difficulty; costiveness, and some degree of colic. In chronic diseases of the kidneys the symptoms are pain in the back and limbs, dryness of the skin, frequent urinations (especially at night), general dropsy, headache, dizziness of sight, indigestion, and palpitation of the heart, gradual loss of strength, paleness and puffiness of the face, cough and shortness of breath.

In diseases of the kidneys the VEGETINE gives immediate relief. It has never failed to cure when it is taken regularly and directions followed. In many cases it may take several bottles, especially cases of long standing. It acts directly upon the secretions, cleansing and strengthening, removing all obstructions and impurities.—A great many can testify to cases of long standing having been perfectly cured by the VEGETINE, even after trying many of the known remedies which are said to be expressly for this disease.

Kidney Complaints.

CURED ME.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 22, 1876.

H. R. STEVENS, ESQ.:

Dear Sir—I have suffered for the last three or four years with Liver Complaint and kidney troubles. Previous to taking the VEGETINE I was under the doctor's care for a long time but he did not help me. My friends all thought I would not recover. I began using the VEGETINE, and realized good effect from it right away. I had taken but three bottles before I was much better. I continued taking a few bottles more, and can now truly say I am enjoying the best of health. I have given it to my little daughter with great success. Since it has done me so much good, I have recommended it to several, and they have all been greatly benefitted by its use.

Respectfully,
J. C. SMITH, 24 S. Francis street,
Place of business, 74 West avenue.

VEGETINE—"The life of all flesh is the blood thereof." And no one can possibly be healthy when the blood is diseased. VEGETINE is composed of substances identical with healthy blood; and when taken into the system for the cure of disease, it is absorbed, and replaces the deficiency which caused the disease.

Vegetine is Sold by all Druggists.

SELLERS' COUGH SYRUP.

THEY were not one: They had only been married a short time. The other day she slung her arm around him and warbled, in a low, tremulous voice: "Do you realize, Adolphus, that now we are married, we are only one?" "No," replied the brute, "I can't realize it. I have just paid a $75 millinery bill, and a lot more of your bills, with several outside precincts to hear from, so I am beginning to realize that, as far as expense goes, instead of being one, we are about a half dozen. I can't take in that idea of our being one just yet, not by a large majority."

We can, without hesitation, say that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has given the best satisfaction. We have sold an immense amount of it during the past winter. WALLACE, HILTON & CO., Druggists, Lock Haven, Pa.

A CASE of "that depends," "And what age is it you are now, dear?" asked the colonel, just back from India, of the tall daughter of his friend, Tomkinson Smith. "Well, that is what I can't quite make out," returned the girl, taking care not to meet her mother's eye "for when I go anywhere with papa I am sixteen, but when I go out with mamma I am never more than twelve next birthday!" The colonel hastened to change the subject.

Cure that Cold.

Do not suffer your lungs to become diseased by allowing a cold to continue without an effort to cure it. Thousands have died premature deaths, the victims of Consumption, by simply neglecting a cold

Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs will cure colds, coughs and consumption surer and quicker than any other remedy. Though slow, is sure if persisted in according to directions.

How she got the notion: Our tailor was telling us about a conversation he had with a lady. "She made me disgusted," he said. "Undertook to flatter me, I think. Called me a man of position and wealth. What should put that idea into her head?" And, anxious to aid him in understanding the situation, we remarked that in all probability she had seen some of his bills, and he at once began to talk about the weather.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption. Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. BUSINESS improving: "So your business is picking up, eh?" said a facetious cobbler to a ragpicker, who had just commenced operations on an ash barrel in front of his shop door. A PLEASANTRY in Kansas: One of the meanest tricks the Democrats have been guilty of was played on Postmaster Crum, of Oswego. BUMBLETON had a severe strain on his conscience the other day. He aims to be the most honest of critics, and on being asked by the father of an animated foghorn how he liked his daughter's voice, he replied: "She sings like a Patti-(under his breath) gonian!"

THE widow's grief: A young widow to the marble cutter—"Tell me, must I put on the tomb of my husband the words 'Eternal regrets,' or simply 'Regrets?'" "Ah, madam," replied the marble worker, with his most charming smile, "that is for you to decide. Does madame think of marrying again soon?"

IT is a mistake to suppose that good writers should be good spellers. When the type-setter gets copy from a bad speller he corrects it; when he gets a good speller's copy he (perhaps from force of habit) changes that also.

ETYMOLOGICAL: "Morning! Cold a blazes 'smorning," greeted a business man yesterday. "Pretty cold, certainly; but why utter such an absurdity as 'cold as blazes?' Blazes are hot, you know." "What would you say?" "Oh, say it's cold enough to freeze two dry rags together or something of that sort." The lesson in etymology being over, both passed on.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.
DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S
Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier.

IT FITTIES AS WELL AS Beautifies the Skin

Removes Tan Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of thirty years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayre, said to a lady of the HAUT TON (a patient:)—"As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin.

HEALTH IS WEALTH.

Health of Body is Wealth of Mind

DR. RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

Pure blood makes sound flesh, strong bone and a clear skin. If you would have your flesh firm, your bones sound without caries, and your complexion fair, use

Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

A remedy composed of ingredients of extraordinary medical properties, essential to purify, heal, repair and invigorate the broken-down and wasted body—QUICK, PLEASANT, SAFE and PERMANENT in its treatment and cure.

No matter by what name the complaint may be designated, whether it be scrofula, consumption, syphilis, ulcers, sores, tumors, boils, erysipelas, or salt rheum, diseases of the lungs, kidneys, bladder, womb, skin, liver, stomach or bowels, either chronic or constitutional, the virus is in the Blood which supplies the waste and builds and repairs these organs and wasted tissues of the system. If the blood is unhealthy, the process of repair must be unsound.

The Sarsaparillian Resolvent

Not only is a compensating remedy, but secures the harmonious action of each of the organs. It establishes throughout the entire system functional harmony and supplies the blood vessels with a pure and healthy current of new life. THE SKIN, after a few days' use of the Sarsaparillian, becomes clear and beautiful. Pimples, blotches, black spots and skin eruptions are removed; sores and ulcers soon cured. Persons suffering from scrofula, eruptive diseases of the eyes, mouth, ears, legs, throat and glands, that have accumulated and spread, either from uncured diseases or mercury, or from the use of corrosive sublimate, may rely upon a cure if the Sarsaparillian is continued a sufficient time to make its impression on the system.

One bottle contains more of the active principles of Medicines than any other Preparation. Taken in teaspoonful doses, while others require five or six times as much.

One Dollar a Bottle.

R. R. R. Radway's Ready Relief.

The Cheapest and Best Medicine for Family Use in the World.
